If you do not contact the business prior to June 1, 2008, the business is required by state law to send it to the State for safekeeping. If that occurs, you are entitled to file a claim for the property with our office at any time in the future. You should be aware, however, that if the property is in the form of securities or safe deposit box contents, the State Controller's Office is required by law to sell the property after a specified time. If your property is sold, you will always be entitled to the net proceeds of the sale. Also, pursuant to state law, the contents of safe deposit boxes with no commercial value may be destroyed after being turned over to the State and allowing a set period of time for the owner to reclaim the property.

Again, to stop your property from being sent to the State, you must contact the business above.
The State Controller's Office does not have your property at this time.
